Paderewski Plays With the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Polish Pianist, Dr. Karl Muck, the Conductor, and the Band . All Win Distinction.

PADERHWSKI combined his talents with those of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall last night, and the blending was a belight to an overflowing house. There was a trinity of stars; for Dr. Karl Muck, the conductor, and the orghestra fairly shared the honors with the Polish pianist. It was a musical evening although the program said he would not soon to be forgotten by any one assist Madeline Walther, a French who was present. Only in superlatives can one write of it.

Was there ever better playing than that of Brahms's second symphony in listening to an aria by Handel and the D minor? A momentary, faulty intonation in the brass was the only blur upon an otherwise perfect performance. If Walther has no color, no sustaining there is another orchestra that excels power and no purity in her voice. this one in tone, precision, balance, modulation and convincing expression. modulation and convincing expression, those who have the privilege of listening to it are fortunate indeed. The composition itself, if it utters no profoundly inspiring word, is void of ambiguities. Its message is simple, melodious, pleasing and interesting. When it was finished Dr. Muck was called out many times. He insisted that his men rise and share the applause with men rise and share the applause with

W. C. I. CONCERT A GHEAT SUCCESS

Wanamaker Auditorium Filled With an Audience Which Was Well Entertained.

The concert given by the Wanamaker Commercial Institute at the Auditorium of the Wanamaker Store last night was a highly interesting event, not only within itself, but as indicating the work being done by the Institute.

It has been organized about six months, and its members number 400 boys and girls. The classes include all branches of elementary education and business training, and these literary and business features are wonderfully and business features are wonderfully successful even thus early.

In addition to these practical educational features, there are classes in which music and calisthenics are taught and a military company of bright, manily-looking boys has been formed. The proceeds of last night's concert were devoted to the worthy cause of arraying this military company in real uniforms.

The programme was made up The programme was made up of

The programme was made up of numbers by the mandolin and singing classes, drills, military marches and exercises, and was excellent and received enthusiastic applicates from the large audiences.

The Institute was organized for the benefit of the Wanamaker employees, and instruction is given them free. The success of the enterprise so far has been extremely gratifying, and the pleasure of these young people in their performance last night was very evident.

proper restraint; of delicacy, refine proper restraint, of dostcary, reline-ment and daintiness of style; of beauti-ful liquid, singing tone, of clean-cut, masterful fingering. He was brought to the front of the stage so often that he yielded finally to the demand-for him to play again. Schumann's "Genoveva" overture completed the programme. SYLVESTER RAWLING.
